Fabric Buntings VIDEO TUTORIAL BUNTING INSTRUCTIONS: STEP 1: Get the bunting pattern ready for use Start by downloading and printing our free bunting template that suits your desires the most. You can choose from three different shapes - a triangle and two types of flags. You can mix and match the shapes or use only one of the shapes. Flag #1 - Bunting triangle template Flag #2 - Double edge pennant template (swallow tail) Flag #3 - Spearhead bunting template Print out the bunting pattern and cut out all excess paper. If you don't have a printer around, you can trace it from your monitor. Measure the scale to ensure correct sizing and use soft tip pencil to avoid damaging the monitor. You can also just draw the template yourself instead. A simple triangle shape in the dimensions of your choice should be good enough. There is no right or wrong design! Now let's get to the instructions on how to make bunting banners. STEP 2: Cut the fabric Take your bunting banner pattern and use it as a guide to cut out the fabric. Cut out two identical pieces for each flag segment, you need one for the front and one for the back. Here's where you need to decide how long you wish your DIY fabric bunting to be. Whether you want it to have 5, 7, 10 or more triangle segments. I suggest you don't make less than six segments because the bunting would look too short, but that's just my opinion. STEP 3: Start sewing the fabric buntings Take the two triangle fabric pieces that will form one segment and place them on each other. Set them so that their right sides lay on each other. Align the edges, pin them together, and start sewing. Use a quarter-inch seam allowance and stitch the two triangles together along the two sides (or the sides and the bottom), but leave the top edge unstitched. STEP 4: Turn the triangles Clip the corners as shown with scissors. Then turn each piece inside out. Make sure to push the corners out nicely. You can do that with the back of a pencil or with a chopstick. If you chose to go with some shapes other than triangles, don't forget to clip and push out all of the corners. Use your iron to press the segment flat. Depending on the type of fabric you decided to use, your triangle segment may not lay flat. If that happens, just topstitch the flag and it will behave! STEP 5: Decide the distance between segments This choice is all your, but I will give you a piece of advice. You can keep the flags about an inch or two away from each other. I suggest you make the distance a bit longer if your bunting is going to be relatively long and you'll place it somewhere outdoors. If you mean to keep it indoors, keep the distance between the segments shorter, as well as the overall length of the entire banner. When you're done with all that, you can start the final sewing. STEP 6: Add the tape You can do this step in two ways, it's up to you to decide which kind of tape you'll use. The first option is to use a ribbon. Fold it in half lengthwise and press it with your iron. Then insert the triangle's top edge between the two layers of the ribbon. Start at least 10 inches from the end so you can hang your bunting proudly after you finish it The second option is to use a double-sided bias tape - you can either buy pre-made or make your own bias binding as I show you in this article. The method is nearly identical. Open the tape and insert the triangle's top edge inside, all the way to the fold, again at least 10 inches from each end. Pin everything in place to keep the layers secure. STEP 7: Finish the bunting flags All that is left now is for you to sew the segments to the tape or the ribbon and your new decorative piece will be finished. Make a stitch that goes along the entire length of the ribbon or tape. You can use either a straight stitch or a zig-zag stitch to add a bit more flair. Set the width and length of the stitch to 3.0 and sew. This kind of zig-zag stitch will catch all edges of the tape or ribbon, instead of catching only the middle, as a straight stitch would. Your seam will be stronger and more durable, so you'll be able to wash the buntings over and over. With this, your new bunting flags are complete! BONUS 1: How to make buntings with pinkish sheers LIGHTING FAST Shh.. come closer. Let me tell you a secret. You can make these bunting banners much faster. If you are making a banner for a wedding or a one-time even and you don't plan on washing the bunting, you can speed up your banner sewing. Here's how. Instead steps 2-4 above do the following: STEP 2*: Cut the fabric with pinking sheers This will result in a neat zig-zagged edge that won't fray so easy as when cutting with standard scissors. Cut 2 per flag as per the original instructions. STEP 3*: Pin the fabrics together Place the fabrics wrong sides together and pin. If you have clips, I would definitely recommend to use them instead as the banner comes together much faster. TIP: After making several banners I can tell you the end result will be much neater if you cut both front and back pieces at once with the pinking sheers. However, I do have an OCD and even minor inaccuracies drive me nuts. If you don't have similar issues, you can cut your fabrics any way you want. omit step 4 - you don't need to turn anything Proceed as per the original instructions - insert the flags inside the tape, pin them with clips and sew along the bottom edge of the tape. Voila! Your bunting banner is done BONUS 2: Decoration suggestions If you want to add something more to your new bunting banner, here are a few suggestions that you just might like. Make the banner so that every third segment is a different shape, and different in color. This will make it a bit more vibrant. Embroider or use a fabric gel pen to write out a letter on each segment to form a creative sign for birthday, weddings, holidays, and more! Stitch on small shapes or even miniature fabric toys onto the center of each segment and use the bunting to decorate your children's room. Free bunting template Use a 1cm (3/8in) seam allowance. Download our Free Bunting template How to make fabric bunting - step by step Fabric (Cotton fabric - 25 x 40cm (10x16in) for each flag) Sewing machine Scissors Iron (For pressing your work) Pins Cotton tape (2.5cm (1in) wide cotton tape, or) Fabric (to make your own) Are you ready to learn how to sew bunting? Let's start with some maths! How much fabric do you need? This depends very much on how long you want your bunting to be. Your finished bunting flags will be 15cm (6in) wide with a gap of 10cm (4in) between them. So, divide the length you want your finished bunting to be by 25cm (10in) to work out how many flags you need to make. Buy cotton tape to the length of your finished bunting plus about 30cm (12in) extra at either end for hanging it up, or watch our video guide to how to make bunting above, as we show you in it how to make your own from white cotton fabric. Download, print out and cut around our free bunting template (above). Cut the fabric in half then place the two pieces right sides (RS) together with the template pinned centrally on top. Cut around the template then pin the two triangles of fabric together. Stitch the two triangles together, but leave the top straight edge open. Trim the seams at the lower edge and bottom point to help the flag lay flat. Turn the triangles RS out and press flat. Repeat this process to make the other flags. Fold and press the cotton tape in half lengthways with wrong sides (WS) together. Pin one flag inside the tape up to the fold, leaving some tape at the end for hanging. Pin the rest of the flags inside the tape, positioning them 10cm (4in) apart. Topstitch along the the tape to keep it folded and hold the flags securely in place.
