How to transfer contacts from ipad to android

It looks increasingly like Android will be the major challenger to both Apple's iPhone and iPad.In the tablet market, Apple's iOS has a commanding lead, while Android is the only other OS that registers a market share in double digits. In the smartphone arena, there are other significant competitors, such as BlackBerry and Windows. However, BlackBerry market share is dropping, according to comScore's latest survey -- in fact, Apple surpassed RIM in comScore's April report -- while Microsoft has yet to make much of a dent.How do Apple's iOS and Google's Android stack up head to head? We look at the numbers.Tablet market shareSource: GartnerThe iPad held a commanding 83.9% of the worldwide tablet market last year, with Android tablets far behind at 14.2%, according to Gartner. Other stats show a similar healthy lead. For example, a recent Modelmetrics Web survey found 83% of respondents planning to roll out iPads in the enterprise and 34% with plans for Android tablets. However, Gartner expects the market-share difference to narrow considerably over the next few years, with iOS holding 47.1% by 2015 and Android growing to 38.6%.Bottom line: iOS should remain the market leader for the next few years, but Android is expected to grow considerably -- largely at Apple's expense. Smartphone market shareSource: comScore MobiLens 3-month average of US smartphone subscribers.Despite its reputation as a groundbreaking smartphone when first introduced in 2007, the iPhone doesn't have the market clout of the iPad. Apple has slightly more than a quarter of the U.S. smartphone market, according to a comScore MobiLens report, but IDC estimates just 15.7% of the global pie . And some analysts expect the iPhone to slip worldwide in the coming years as both Android and Windows Phone gain traction. IDC predicts that Windows Phone will be the No. 2 OS behind Android worldwide by 2015, with iOS in third place. Switching to an iPhone from Android might seem like a daunting process. You probably have a deep contact list that has been curated over the years. Thankfully, it's pretty easy to transfer your contacts to an iPhone. Option 1: During the Initial Setup Process Apple has an official "Move to iOS" app that's available in the Google Play Store for Android devices. This is a great tool, but it only works while setting up a new iPhone. If your iPhone hasn't been set up yet, download the app on your Android device and follow the instructions to transfer contacts. Apple There are still a few options to transfer contacts if you've already gotten past the initial iPhone setup process. RELATED: How to Switch From Android to iPhone Option 2: Import Your Google Contacts If the contacts on your Android phone are backed up to your Google account, we can transfer them to your iPhone easily. First, open the Settings app on your iPhone. Scroll down to "Contacts." Next, select "Accounts." If you didn't add your Google account here already, tap "Add Account." (If you have added it, tap the name of your Google account.) Now, we can select "Google" from the list of services. Follow the steps to sign in to the same Google account that you used on your Android device. After you're signed in, you'll be brought to a screen with a few options for things to sync. Make sure that "Contacts" is toggled on and tap "Save." That's all there is to it for Google contacts. You'll see all of your contacts appear in the iPhone "Contacts" app right away. Option 3: Export and Import a File Not everyone has their contacts synced up to a service. The best solution, in this case, is to export your contacts from Android and import them onto your iPhone. This process will look slightly different depending on your Android device. For example, we'll use Google's Contacts app for Android. Open the app on your Android device and tap the hamburger menu in the top-left corner. Select "Settings" from the menu. Scroll down to the "Manage Contacts" section and select "Export." You'll be brought to a file manager, and you can select where you want to save the .vcf file. Tap "Save" when you're done. Now, you need to get that .vcf file onto your iPhone somehow. You can email it to yourself, upload it to a cloud storage service such as Google Drive, or send it over Bluetooth. Do whatever you're comfortable with. After you get it onto your iPhone, open the .vcf file once it's there. When it asks which app you'd like to open the file in, select "Contacts." Now, you can select the contacts individually to create new contacts or merge with existing contacts. To transfer them all, tap "Add All # Contacts" at the top. Select "Add All # Contacts" to confirm your decision. That's all there is to it. Your contacts will now be moved over to your iPhone, and you can put your Android device in a drawer and forget about it. Or, you could turn it into something useful. RELATED: How to Turn an Old Android Phone into a Security Camera iCloud: On both phones, go to Settings > [Your name] > iCloud. Slide Contacts to On position. If opted, merge contacts to avoid losing any.Backup: On old phone, turn on iCloud Backup. Choose Back Up Now. On new phone, go to Apps & Data > Restore from iCloud Backup.iTunes: Connect old phone to computer/iTunes. Go to Backups > This Computer > Back Up Now. On new phone, choose Restore Backup. In this guide, we detail five ways to transfer contacts between iPhones: via iCloud, an iCloud backup, iTunes, web-based tools, and third-party software. Instructions in this article apply to iPhones with iOS 9 and up. The easiest methods to transfer contacts use features that come with the iPhone, such as iCloud. Since iCloud can keep data synchronized across all your devices, using it to sync contacts from iPhone to iPhone makes it an easy choice. Ensure that both iPhones are signed in with the same Apple ID and are connected to Wi-Fi. On both phones, open Settings, tap your name, then tap iCloud. Move the Contacts slider to on/green. This step will upload your contacts to iCloud if they're not already there. If lots of contacts need to be backed up, it might take a while to finish. If a message appears about merging the contacts, choose that option so that none of the contacts are deleted. Because data from both phones first uploads to iCloud and then syncs to both phones, you have to sync all of your contacts to both devices. Alex Dos Diaz / Lifewire Beyond the contact syncing process from the last section, iCloud can also make a backup of the data on your iPhone and then restore that backup onto a different iPhone. Here's how: Connect the iPhone to Wi-Fi. Backing up to iCloud requires lots of data. Use Wi-Fi instead of the cellular data included with your phone plan. On the iPhone with the contacts on it, tap Settings > [your name]. If prompted, log in with your Apple ID. Older devices may not display your name on this screen. Tap iCloud > iCloud Backup. Move the iCloud Backup slider to on/green, then select Back Up Now. If you see a message about your iPhone no longer backing up to your computer automatically when you sync with iTunes, tap OK. The iPhone uploads your contacts and other data to iCloud. This backs up the entire iPhone, so it will take a while. On the new iPhone you want to have the iCloud backup applied to, follow the standard new iPhone setup procedure. On the Apps & Data screen, choose Restore from iCloud Backup and follow the prompts to finish restoring the iPhone backup and copy your old contacts to the new phone. If your new iPhone has already been set up, restore the backup data onto it by erasing the content and settings and choosing to restore from an iCloud backup when prompted. If you prefer to back up your iPhone to a computer, use iTunes instead of iCloud. Here's what to do: Connect the old iPhone to the computer you normally sync it with. Open iTunes and access the screen that shows your iPhone. If it doesn't open automatically, click the Phone icon. In the Backups section, click This Computer, then click Back Up Now. If you're asked about encrypting the backup to make your iPhone more secure, either do so with the Encrypt Backups button. You can decline by selecting Don't Encrypt. You can change this setting later. Wait while the iPhone backs up to the computer. To monitor the progress, watch the blue progress bar at the top of iTunes. When the backup is complete, eject the old iPhone and plug in the new one. To restore the new iPhone from the backup, select Restore Backup and follow the prompts. If iTunes explains that you have to first disable Find My iPhone in order to restore the backup, do so through the iCloud > Find My iPhone option in the Settings app. iCloud isn't the only cloud-based service that stores and syncs contacts. Google and Yahoo are two other examples. There's a robust world of third-party software that transfer contacts, usually rather quickly since they don't deal with iTunes or iCloud. My Contacts Backups is one example of a contact list backup app that works by having you email the contact list to yourself so that you can copy the contacts to your new iPhone. Just open your mail on the new phone, select the attachment, and import the list. If you've used other phones that can transfer contacts from the SIM card, you might be wondering if you can do the same on your iPhone. This method backs up contacts to the SIM card and then you move the old SIM to the new phone to use the backup. It's not so simple for the iPhone because the feature isn't supported with the iPhone SIM card. Learn more in How to Back Up Contacts to iPhone SIM. Thanks for letting us know! (Image credit: Apple) If you've decided to swap from an Android to an Apple device, you'll want to know how to transfer contacts and data from Android to iPhone. After all, there's no sense in abandoning your photos, messages, calendar appointments and contact details behind just because you're leaving Android.The unfortunate news is that unless you're setting up an iPhone from scratch, there's no easy way to transfer all of your contacts and data over, except by doing it manually. However the silver lining is that doing so with a box-fresh iPhone is made super easy thanks to a dedicated Apple app.We'll take you through the process below so your jump from Android to iOS is as quick and easy as possible. If you're new to iPhones, then you may also want to learn about how to back up your iPhone, so you can keep all that newly transferred data safe. We've also got a guide on how to use Apple Pay with your iPhone, so you can make contactless payments with ease.1. The first step is to download Apple's dedicated Move to iOS for moving Android data onto its iOS devices. Simply open the Google Play Store, search for 'Move to iOS (opens in new tab)', then download the app. You'll need to give it permission to access your data, otherwise it won't work.2. You can then concentrate on setting up your new iPhone. Go through the set-up process as instructed until you get to the Apps and Data screen. Here, you need to select Move Data from Android. You'll then get a code to input on your Android phone. (Image credit: Apple)3. Back on your old Android phone, open up the Move to iOS app. Agree to the permissions and terms it requires, then go to the Find you Code screen. Here you can input the string of numbers that appeared on the iPhone, which will connect the two phones with a local Wi-Fi connection. Make sure both phones have Wi-Fi enabled otherwise this won't work.4. If you now look at your old Android phone, you'll find the Transfer Data screen, which has a list of things you can send over to the iPhone, including contacts. Select 'contacts' and other data here to transfer then over.Keep in mind that if you don't transfer your other data now, you won't be able to do so later. The only way to perform this step afterwards is to reset the iPhone and transfer your data over again, or by moving your data over manually after set-up. It's therefore worth selecting all of the items you want on your iPhone to transfer now, not just contacts.(Image credit: Apple)5. Now you've got to let the phones do their work. Don't close the Move to iOS app on your Android phone, and wait until your data's moved across. The time this can take will vary significantly depending on how much data you've selected to be moved.6. With your data now on the iPhone, you can finish setting it up without your Android phone. Double-check the Contacts app when you're sent to the home screen, to ensure the transfer was a complete success, before you reset your old Android phone.
